AP[®] World History: Modern

Scoring Guidelines Set 1

Question 1: Short Answer Secondary Text3 points*General Scoring Notes

- Each point is earned independently.
- Accuracy: These scoring guidelines require that students demonstrate historically defensible content knowledge. Given the timed nature of the exam, responses may contain errors that do not detract from their overall quality, as long as the historical content used to advance the argument is accurate.
- Clarity: Exam responses should be considered first drafts and thus may contain grammatical errors. Those errors will not be counted against a student unless they obscure the successful demonstration of the content knowledge, skills, and practices described below.
- Describe: Provide the relevant characteristics of a specified topic. Description requires more than simply mentioning an isolated term.
- Explain: Provide information about how or why a historical development or process occurs or how or why a relationship exists.

(A) Identify ONE claim that the author makes in the passage.

1 pointExamples that earn this point include the following:

- The author claims that modern European empires fell rapidly.
- The author claims that nationalism was the cause of resistance to colonial empires.
- One claim that the author makes is that subject peoples were willing to remain subjugated by a colonial power if a significant number of them saw benefits from such subjugation.

(B) Explain how ONE development in the second half of the twentieth century could be used to support the author’s claim about nationalism in the second paragraph.

1 pointExamples that earn this point include the following:

- Nationalist sentiments increased in the second half of the twentieth century and led revolutionaries to overthrow governments.
- The Indian independence movement was largely driven by nationalists who wanted to end British colonial rule.
- The Vietnamese resistance movement against French rule was an example of nationalist resistance that supports the author’s argument.
- Nationalist resistance in Africa supports the author’s claim because nationalist leaders such as Kwame Nkrumah led the struggle for independence based on self-governance and economic development.

- (C) Explain how ONE development from the nineteenth or twentieth century could be used to challenge a claim that the author makes in the first paragraph. 1 point

Examples that earn this point include the following:

- The author’s claim is challenged by the many examples of colonial resistance to imperial rule.
- The author’s claim is challenged by examples of European colonial powers managing to retain colonies well into the 1970 or 1980s (for example, the Portuguese maintaining control of Angola or Mozambique).
- Relatively few colonial subjects welcomed invitations to integrate politically with the imperial “motherland” or become full citizens (as demonstrated by the case of Senegal or Algeria in the French Empire).

Question 2: Short Answer Primary Text3 points*General Scoring Notes

- Each point is earned independently.
- Accuracy: These scoring guidelines require that students demonstrate historically defensible content knowledge. Given the timed nature of the exam, responses may contain errors that do not detract from their overall quality, as long as the historical content used to advance the argument is accurate.
- Clarity: Exam responses should be considered first drafts and thus may contain grammatical errors. Those errors will not be counted against a student unless they obscure the successful demonstration of the content knowledge, skills, and practices described below.
- Describe: Provide the relevant characteristics of a specified topic. Description requires more than simply mentioning an isolated term.
- Explain: Provide information about how or why a historical development or process occurs or how or why a relationship exists.

(A) Identify ONE claim that the author makes about the Mamluks in the first paragraph. 1 point

Examples that earn this point include the following:

- The Mamluks were chosen by God to save Egypt.
- The Mamluks were guardian rulers and defended Islam.
- Many Turkish enslaved persons converted to Islam and were true believers, even though they remained nomadic.

(B) Identify ONE way the passage illustrates the political situation of the Islamic world in the period before circa 1450. 1 point

Examples that earn this point include the following:

- The passage illustrates the lack of unity among Islamic states.
- The passage illustrates that Islamic rulers invested heavily in soldiers.
- The passage illustrates that Islamic rulers patronized religious learning.
- The passage demonstrates how Islamic rulers engaged in a variety of activities that increased their power, such as appointing trusted officials to important positions, training a powerful military, and supporting religious teachings.

(C) Explain ONE way the passage could be used to illustrate differences in forms of coerced labor in the period before circa 1750. 1 point

Examples that earn this point include the following:

- The formerly enslaved Mamluks could rise to high political positions, such as sultan, unlike enslaved persons in the Americas.
- The ability of the Mamluks to achieve high status in Egypt differs from other forms of coerced labor. In the Americas, for example, the purpose of slavery was mostly economic, and enslaved persons largely worked on plantations.

- Because the Mamluks were male, they were afforded the opportunity to receive military training and political promotion unlike enslaved women in Islamic societies.

Question 3: Short Answer No Stimulus3 points*General Scoring Notes

- Each point is earned independently.
- Accuracy: These scoring guidelines require that students demonstrate historically defensible content knowledge. Given the timed nature of the exam, responses may contain errors that do not detract from their overall quality, as long as the historical content used to advance the argument is accurate.
- Clarity: Exam responses should be considered first drafts and thus may contain grammatical errors. Those errors will not be counted against a student unless they obscure the successful demonstration of the content knowledge, skills, and practices described below.
- Describe: Provide the relevant characteristics of a specified topic. Description requires more than simply mentioning an isolated term.
- Explain: Provide information about how or why a historical development or process occurs or how or why a relationship exists.

- (A) Identify ONE reason for the increase in the movement of enslaved peoples across the Atlantic Ocean during the period circa 1450–1750. 1 point

Examples that earn this point include the following:

- The increased demand for enslaved peoples was due to a need for more labor.
- More enslaved peoples from Africa were brought across the Atlantic because of the increased number of sugar plantations.
- The loss of indigenous peoples due to disease led to a demand for more workers.

- (B) Explain ONE way the increasing number of enslaved peoples resulted in social or cultural change in the Americas during the period circa 1450–1750. 1 point

Examples that earn this point include the following:

- Enslaved Africans brought over their own religions, which mixed with Christianity to create syncretic beliefs.
- New social classes emerged as Europeans created terms like mestizos and mulattoes to refer to the children born to African enslaved peoples, indigenous peoples, and European settlers.
- The Spanish created a racial hierarchy known as the casta system to classify mixed-race families, which also allowed Europeans to maintain social dominance.

- (C) Explain ONE way the increased demand for enslaved peoples affected African populations during the period circa 1450–1750. 1 point

Examples that earn this point include the following:

- There was a demographic impact due to the increased number of people being enslaved, as most were young men, leaving many African societies with gender imbalance.

AP® World History: Modern 2023 Scoring Guidelines

- The increased demand for enslaved peoples resulted in an extreme loss of population in West Africa and politically weakened many kingdoms, such as Kongo.
- Increased demand for enslaved peoples led to higher levels of warfare among African states, as they sought to respond to European demand.
- Enslaved peoples from Africa often suffered high mortality rates due to poor conditions aboard ships and harsh working conditions in the Americas.

Question 4: Short Answer No Stimuli3 points*General Scoring Notes

- Each point is earned independently.
- Accuracy: These scoring guidelines require that students demonstrate historically defensible content knowledge. Given the timed nature of the exam, responses may contain errors that do not detract from their overall quality, as long as the historical content used to advance the argument is accurate.
- Clarity: Exam responses should be considered first drafts and thus may contain grammatical errors. Those errors will not be counted against a student unless they obscure the successful demonstration of the content knowledge, skills, and practices described below.
- Describe: Provide the relevant characteristics of a specified topic. Description requires more than simply mentioning an isolated term.
- Explain: Provide information about how or why a historical development or process occurs or how or why a relationship exists.

- (A) Identify ONE way that environmental conditions contributed to the beginning of industrialization in the 18th century and early 19th centuries. 1 point

Examples that earn this point include the following:

- The location of coal and other resources helped some countries industrialize.
- Access to rivers or other waterways made it easier for manufacturers to harness water as a source of energy and export products.
- Geographic regions that had easy access to natural resources, navigable waterways, and possessed capital were able to industrialize in the eighteenth century.

- (B) Explain ONE way societies or governments reacted to industrialization in the 18th and 19th centuries. 1 point

Examples that earn this point include the following:

- Some governments responded to industrialization by adopting various social and urban reforms.
- Some workers responded to the challenges of living in an industrial society by forming labor unions to defend their rights.
- Some societies, such as Meiji Japan, responded to European industrialization by attempting to modernize their economy and military in order to match European power.

- (C) Explain ONE way human activity led to environmental changes in the 20th century. 1 point

Examples that earn this point include the following:

- Increased use of fossil fuels led to higher levels of pollution.
- The Green Revolution is an example of humans changing their environment by creating new varieties of crops to support a growing population.
- Environmental disasters such as the BP oil spill or the nuclear explosion at Chernobyl have had significant long-term effects on soil, animal populations, and water.

Question 1: Document-Based Question, Qing Empire Collapse

7 points

General Scoring Notes

- Except where otherwise noted, each point of these rubrics is earned independently; for example, a student could earn a point for evidence without earning a point for thesis/claim.
- Accuracy: The components of these rubrics require that students demonstrate historically defensible content knowledge. Given the timed nature of the exam, essays may contain errors that do not detract from their overall quality, as long as the historical content used to advance the argument is accurate.
- Clarity: Exam essays should be considered first drafts and thus may contain grammatical errors. Those errors will not be counted against a student unless they obscure the successful demonstration of the content knowledge, skills, and practices described below.

| Row D (continued) | Complexity | |
| | 0 points Does not meet the criteria for one point. | 1 point Demonstrates a complex understanding of the historical development that is the focus of the prompt, using evidence to corroborate, qualify, or modify an argument that addresses the question. |
| | Decision Rules and Scoring Notes | |
| | Responses that earn this point: May demonstrate a complex understanding in a variety of ways, such as: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Explaining nuance of an issue by analyzing multiple variables. • Explaining both similarity and difference, or explaining both continuity and change, or explaining multiple causes, or explaining both causes and effects. • Explaining relevant and insightful connections within and across periods. • Confirming the validity of an argument by corroborating multiple perspectives across themes. • Qualifying or modifying an argument by considering diverse or alternative views or evidence. Demonstrating complex understanding might include any of the following, if appropriate elaboration is provided: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Analyzing multiple variables, such as considering diverse or alternate perspectives or evidence, for example, an argument that while the Qing Dynasty had to deal with considerable outside threats and pressures in the 19th century (Documents 2, 3, 5, and 6) it also faced many problems that related to deteriorating domestic socio-economic and political conditions (Documents 2 and 4) and rising Han Chinese nationalism (Documents 5 and 7). (Explains nuance) • Explaining relevant and insightful connections across time and space, such as explaining the similarities (e.g., foreign concessions and extraterritorial rights, reform attempts frustrated by conservative resistance, nationalist challenges to the state, problems with population pressure) and differences (e.g., World War I, territorial collapse of Ottoman Empire due to Arab nationalism and war) between China and the Ottoman Empire as “semi-sovereign” states that collapsed during the age of Western Imperialism. Likewise, students could explore why the Qing Dynasty collapsed despite reform attempts while Meiji Japan was able to industrialize and become a world power (e.g., more homogenous Japanese population and no population explosion, more Japanese openness to cultural borrowing, effective leadership from the Japanese emperor). (Explains relevant and insightful connections) • Qualifies or modifies an argument by considering diverse or alternative views or evidence, such as bringing in information from outside the documents to qualify or modify the content or perspectives of the documents. For instance, the population explosion faced by the Qing Dynasty (referred to indirectly in Document 4), which initially could be taken as a sign of its success, might have led to the collapse of the dynasty regardless of pressure from foreign powers. The collapse of the dynasty might also be explained as having taken place despite China’s successful and rapid modernization in the late 19th and early 20th centuries in response to outside influences, which included new ideas (Document 5), the mass media (Document 6), and a military coup (alluded to in Document 7). (Corroborates, qualifies, or modifies an argument by considering diverse or alternative views or evidence) | |
| Additional Notes: This demonstration of complex understanding must be part of the argument, not merely a phrase or reference. | | |

Document Summaries

| Document | Summary of Content | Explains the relevance of point of view (POV), purpose, historical situation, and/or audience by elaborating on examples such as: |
|--|--|--|
| 1. Petition from two local government officials to provincial governor, circa 1850 | States that for the last several years, banditry has been increasing locally; bandits and rebels have captured the district capital and have effectively supplanted the government. Pleads with the provincial government to send troops to eradicate the rebels; the local militia is no longer able to keep them at bay. | <ul style="list-style-type: none"> Because the petition is an appeal for the provincial government to intervene militarily and restore order, it highlights the damages that bandits have done to government authority in the province (levying taxes on the population, issuing false orders, and misusing official seals). (purpose, audience) The authors use their position as local officials to lend greater credibility to their claims. (POV) |
| 2. Karl Marx, “Revolution in China and in Europe,” 1853 | Marx blames unrestricted British opium exports to China for the weakness and corruption of the Qing state and for the Taiping Rebellion and says British machine-produced textiles were wiping out Chinese producers and creating additional misery. | <ul style="list-style-type: none"> Marx believed capitalism would spread around the world in a search for profits and, in doing so, would cause unrest, misery, and destroy traditional forms of production (e.g., the Chinese textile industry). (POV) Marx was writing about a decade after the First Opium War (1839-1842), after which China was forced to sign “unequal treaties” that “opened” China to foreign trade and Christian missionaries; the increased economic and cultural contact with the West that followed helped provoke the Taiping Rebellion (1851-1864) and other unrest in China. (historical situation) |
| 3. Qing Foreign Office, policy letter, 1878 | The Foreign Office acknowledges that foreigners enjoy extraterritorial rights in China but denies that they can break Chinese laws without consequences. Chinese converts to Christianity may not claim immunity from Chinese law. | <ul style="list-style-type: none"> The memo was written at a time when many resident foreigners in China possessed “extraterritorial” legal rights; these rights and the related “unequal treaties” were highly unpopular in China since they symbolized the weakness of the Chinese state. (historical situation) The memo reminded Chinese diplomats of Qing policy so the diplomats could properly advise foreign visitors and governments. (purpose, audience) |
| 4. Village elders from Caozhou, report to provincial government, 1896 | The elders complain about a growing gap between the rich and poor and the inability of hired farm laborers to earn a living, which leads many to become bandits. | <ul style="list-style-type: none"> The elders were concerned that village society was breaking down due to the poor economic situation. (POV) The report addresses the banditry problem, which was a consequence of population growth and rural poverty in nineteenth-century China. (historical situation) |

| 5. Chinese Alliance Association, “Revolutionary Proclamation,” 1907 | The proclamation calls for the expulsion of the Manchu and the return of Han rule in China and for a people’s revolution based on liberty, equality, and fraternity. | <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • The authors were influenced by Han Chinese nationalism as well as Western liberal political ideas in calling for the overthrow of the Qing Empire and the establishment of a republic. (POV) • This proclamation was issued to the Chinese people in hopes of gathering their support for the overthrow of the Qing Dynasty and the introduction of political and economic reforms in China. (purpose, audience) |
| 7. Abdication decree of the child Emperor Puyi, 1912 | The document is a resignation from Emperor Puyi, issued by the regent empress, indicating that since the Republic revolutionary army emerged, the Will of Heaven has become clear, and the emperor must abdicate in favor of a constitutional government. | <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • The abdication occurs at the end of Qing Dynasty following the 1911 Revolution (also known as the Xinhai Revolution). (historical situation) • The decree is likely intended for all the world, especially the citizens of China, to explain the decision to abdicate. The court likely wants to stop the fighting between revolutionary forces and the old government forces. (purpose, audience) |

Question 2: Long Essay Question, Mongol Expansion and Eurasia

6 points

General Scoring Notes

- Except where otherwise noted, each point of these rubrics is earned independently; for example, a student could earn a point for evidence without earning a point for thesis/claim.
- Accuracy: The components of these rubrics require that students demonstrate historically defensible content knowledge. Given the timed nature of the exam, essays may contain errors that do not detract from their overall quality, as long as the historical content used to advance the argument is accurate.
- Clarity: Exam essays should be considered first drafts and thus may contain grammatical errors. Those errors will not be counted against a student unless they obscure the successful demonstration of the content knowledge, skills, and practices described below.

In the period circa 1200 to 1450, the expansion of empires such as the Mongol Empire facilitated trade and communication across Eurasia.

Develop an argument that evaluates the extent to which Mongol expansion affected the peoples of Eurasia during this period.

Question 3: Long Essay Question, Land-based Empires Expanding Power

6 points

General Scoring Notes

- Except where otherwise noted, each point of these rubrics is earned independently; for example, a student could earn a point for evidence without earning a point for thesis/claim.
- Accuracy: The components of these rubrics require that students demonstrate historically defensible content knowledge. Given the timed nature of the exam, essays may contain errors that do not detract from their overall quality, as long as the historical content used to advance the argument is accurate.
- Clarity: Exam essays should be considered first drafts and thus may contain grammatical errors. Those errors will not be counted against a student unless they obscure the successful demonstration of the content knowledge, skills, and practices described below.

In the period circa 1450 to 1750, rulers of land-based empires, such as the Mughal, the Ottoman, and the Safavid empires, used a variety of religious, political, and economic methods to legitimize and consolidate their power.

Develop an argument that evaluates the extent to which a land-based empire successfully consolidated or expanded its power during this period.

(Explaining both similarities and differences) • Corroborating an argument by demonstrating how the Ottoman Empire successfully centralized its administration and competed against expanding European maritime empires but failed to modernize and eventually fell far behind European industrial economies. Question 4: Long Essay Question, Challenges to Power Structures

6 points

General Scoring Notes

- Except where otherwise noted, each point of these rubrics is earned independently; for example, a student could earn a point for evidence without earning a point for thesis/claim.
- Accuracy: The components of these rubrics require that students demonstrate historically defensible content knowledge. Given the timed nature of the exam, essays may contain errors that do not detract from their overall quality, as long as the historical content used to advance the argument is accurate.
- Clarity: Exam essays should be considered first drafts and thus may contain grammatical errors. Those errors will not be counted against a student unless they obscure the successful demonstration of the content knowledge, skills, and practices described below.

In the mid- to late-twentieth century, a variety of political, military, and nonviolent methods were used to bring about political and social change.

Develop an argument that evaluates the extent to which an individual, group, or movement in the mid- to late-twentieth century successfully challenged existing power structures during this period.

| Demonstrating complex understanding might include any of the following, if appropriate elaboration is provided: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Explaining the nuance of an issue by analyzing multiple variables, such as explaining that between 1989 and 1992, in much of the world, anticommunist protests succeeded at overturning the Soviet Union, but in Asia, communist one-party states maintained their grip on power. (Explains nuance and qualifies an argument) • Explaining relevant and insightful connections across time and space, such as demonstrating the influence of socialist ideas and tactics in resisting power structures in Asia (Vietnam), Africa (Tanzania), as well as Latin America (Cuba). (Explains relevant and insightful connections.) • Explaining both similarities and differences by explaining that similar groups with similar nationalist goals could use very different methods to achieve their goals, such as comparing Nelson Mandela in South Africa with Robert Mugabe in Zimbabwe. (Explains both similarities and differences) • Corroborating an argument by exploring the complexities of differing approaches to opposing power structures during the Cold War, including evidence that some Westerners supported communism, or that some socialist independence leaders and movements chose to ally with the West, rather than with the Soviet bloc.
